Cargo vessel sinks off Ukraine after explosion, all crewmembers rescued

Estonian-owned general cargo vessel Helt has been sunk in the Black Sea off the coast of Ukraine following an explosion, the Ukrainian Sea Ports Authority reported.

All six crewmembers were able to abandon ship and Ukrainian officials said they were later rescued.

The Panama-flagged ship is believed to have hit a mine some 20 nautical miles off Odessa. "The ship received a hole below the waterline," the ports authority said.

According to the State Border Guard Service of Ukraine, the 2,100 dwt Helt was taken hostage by the Russian Navy yesterday to "use it as a shield in order to hide behind it from the Ukrainian anti-ship weapons."
