2009: The 1988-built, 45,003 dwt chemical tanker KASHMIR collided in restricted visibility with the 2006-built, 1,440 teu containership SIMA SAMAN at approximately 9.40 a.m. on Tuesday in a busy shipping channel between five to eight miles off the port Jebel Ali.
... a fire broke out on both ships as a result of the collision which led to two of the 22 tanks of the tanker being ruptured. The KASHMIR was reported to have been carrying 30,000 tonnes of oil condensates. By the evening of yesterday the fire was controlled and extinguished and both ships anchored in safe waters off the port.
 There were no casualties reported however two crew members of the SIMA SAMAN lifted out of the water and are reported to have suffered slight injuries.
 No pollution has so far been reported although it appears that the KASHMIR may have lost some of its cargo.
